CENSUS OF 1911.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE JOHN BURNS, M.P.,

PRESIDENT OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, ETC.

CENSUS OFFICE,
LONDON, S.W.,
31st August, 1912.

SIR,

We have the honour to submit the third volume of the detailed abstracts of the Census returns. In the first and second volumes the several administrative areas and registration areas were dealt with. Statistics of acreage, population and families or separate occupiers were given for all Administrative Counties; for County Boroughs, Municipal Boroughs and other Urban Districts with their constituent Wards and Civil Parishes; for Rural Districts with their constituent Civil Parishes; for Registration Districts with their constituent sub-districts and Civil Parishes; and for certain other areas. Particulars were also given of changes of boundaries in civil parishes and registration districts during the intercensal period.

The present volume contains figures for the Parliamentary Areas of England and Wales—Counties and Boroughs, with their Divisions—showing for each constituency the number of families or separate occupiers; the population, male and female; the number of electors on the register which came into force on the 1st January, 1911; comparative figures of population and number of electors in 1901; and the area of each County Division and of each Parliamentary Borough.

Parliamentary Counties.—The area and the total population of every County at successive Censuses from 1801 appear in the first table. The county here referred to is the Ancient or Geographical County (see page vii, Volume I) as modified in certain cases by the Parliamentary Boundaries Act, 1832. By this Act many of the detached parts of counties were, for the purposes of the election of members of Parliament, transferred to the counties in which they were locally situate; and by a later Act, in 1844, this transference of detached portions was made applicable to all purposes. The alterations of boundaries thus effected were numerous, and in some cases involved the transfer of a considerable area; particulars of these changes are shown in the 1851 Census tables. A few minor alterations of county boundaries were made under Sec. 18 of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, which gave effect for parliamentary purposes to some of the parochial changes made under the Divided Parishes and Poor Law Amendment Acts, 1876 to 1882.

Divisions of Counties.—No other alterations of the external boundaries of parliamentary counties appear to have taken place since 1844, but the several divisions of counties which were made by the Reform Act of 1832 were modified by the Boundary Act, 1868, and lastly by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885.

The county divisions were originally based on the Hundreds or similar ancient jurisdictions (e.g., Lathes in Kent and Rapes in Sussex), and the object of the re-division in 1868 was "to equalize as far as practicable the population of each division and to render the division as compact as possible with regard to geographical position without disturbing the old-established and well-understood boundaries of Hundreds" (see Report of Boundary Commissioners, 1868). Where it was found impracticable to follow the boundary of the Hundred, the arrangement of Petty Sessional Divisions* was adopted.

In 1884, however, the Commissioners who had been appointed to inquire into the boundaries to be assigned to the divisions affected by the proposed Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, were instructed that each division should, as a rule, be based upon "petty sessional divisions or other areas consisting of an aggregate of parishes," and that "a divisional boundary should not intersect a parish." After consideration the Commissioners determined to follow Petty Sessional Divisions in preference to any other areas consisting of an aggregate of parishes. They objected to the Hundred as a basis on the ground that "it is now [1884] almost obsolete, often has detached parts, and its boundaries are in some instances no longer ascertainable." Poor Law Unions were held to be unsuitable because nearly 200 of them overlapped county boundaries. The Petty Sessional Division, on the other hand, "is always contained within the county, and its units, like those of the Poor Law Union, consist in almost all cases of entire parishes" (see Report of Boundary Commissioners, 1885).

The Petty Sessional Division as existing on the 1st January, 1885, was therefore adopted as the basis of the Parliamentary Division as at present constituted, and this was doubtless the most convenient arrangement at the time. Subsequent changes, however, in the boundaries of Petty Sessional Divisions, as well as the very many parochial changes effected in consequence of the Local Government Acts of 1888 and 1894, and by the London Government Act, 1899, have brought about a very general divergence of administrative from parliamentary boundaries, while varying rates of increase of population in different parts of the country have seriously impaired the equality in numbers, which was one of the objects aimed at by the successive redistributions.

Parliamentary Boroughs.—Until the passing of the Reform Act of 1832 the Parliamentary Borough appears to have been almost invariably identical with the Municipal Borough. By that Act some boroughs were disfranchised, some places were created boroughs for parliamentary purposes only, and in some cases the parliamentary limits of the borough were extended beyond the municipal limits.

Further alterations in the boundaries of parliamentary boroughs were made by the Reform Act of 1867 and the Boundary Act, 1868, under which extensions of existing boroughs were effected in sixty-nine cases, ten new boroughs were created and four disfranchised. These alterations did not involve corresponding increase of municipal areas, but the growth of urban populations created a tendency on the part of municipal to outgrow parliamentary limits during the succeeding period.

The Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, disfranchised 81 parliamentary boroughs, created 33 new boroughs and altered the boundaries of 37 existing boroughs in England and Wales. The disfranchised boroughs included all those which had at the Census of 1881 a population of less than 15,000, and a few larger boroughs which included considerable extra-municipal areas. The alterations of borough boundaries effected under this Act were, with few exceptions, extensions of the existing areas, and in many cases re-established the identity of the municipal with the parliamentary limits. Municipalities are, however, still constantly enlarging their boundaries, and much of the simplification of areas resulting from the Act of 1885 has now been lost. Not only were the outer boundaries of many parliamentary boroughs brought into line with the municipal boundaries, but the internal divisions of boroughs which were introduced by this Act followed in many cases the ward boundaries, and thus the area for local elections under the Municipal Corporation Acts (or under the Metropolis Management Act) became also the basis of the area for the election of members of Parliament; in some of the boroughs municipal changes have affected these relations, and in the Metropolis the correspondence of local with parliamentary electoral areas no longer exists.

* These Divisions, many of which had already been customarily observed, were constituted or defined by justices of the peace at Quarter Sessions in pursuance of an Act of 1828 (9 Geo. IV, cap. 43), and consisted of the parishes, tithings, townships and places which "in the opinion of such justices would together form a convenient and proper division within and for which special sessions should thenceforward be held." Such divisions were, except in special cases, to remain fixed for twenty-one years after the date of their formation. In order, however, to bring petty sessional divisions into relation with the poor law unions formed in 1834, the justices at quarter sessions were empowered by an Act in 1836 (6 Will. IV, cap. 12) to alter the boundaries of the divisions after three years from the date of their formation.

Table 4 in this volume shows the constitution by parishes of the 178 Parliamentary Boroughs (including Contributory Boroughs) in England and Wales and the differences at the date of the Census of 1911 between the parliamentary and municipal limits; municipal boroughs which are wholly included in county divisions are not shown. It will be seen from the table that in only 30 cases were the parliamentary and municipal borough boundaries identical, and the differences in the other 148 boroughs are in some cases very considerable. For example, Hythe had a population of over 50,000 within its parliamentary limits, which include, in addition to the municipal borough of Hythe with a population of only 6,387, the whole of Folkestone municipal borough, and Sandgate and Cheriton urban districts, and parts of Elham and Romney Marsh rural districts. Christchurch parliamentary borough contained 88,731 persons, of whom only 5,104 were within the municipal limits; 4,956 were in the rural district and 78,671 in Bournemouth county borough. Other striking examples of parliamentary boroughs containing large extra-municipal populations are Dudley, Newcastle under Lyme and Wolverhampton, while, on the other hand, the county boroughs of Manchester and Leicester, and the metropolitan borough of the City of Westminster each contain populations considerably in excess of the parliamentary boroughs of the same names.

In Wales many of the parliamentary boroughs are so small that they are grouped together to form single constituencies; thus the Flint District of Boroughs comprises eight contributory boroughs, only one of which corresponds with any municipal or parochial area.

The parliamentary boroughs in London differ throughout from the metropolitan boroughs into which the Administrative County of London was divided by the London Government Act, 1899; that Act provided for such improvements and simplification of boundaries as might be expedient for convenience of administration; the newly created boroughs were re-divided into wards and the parochial boundaries were adjusted, but the old parliamentary boundaries were retained.

Since the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Acts, 1885, there has been no re-constitution of parliamentary areas.

Number and Population of Parliamentary Areas.—The Parliamentary areas into which England and Wales is divided number 168, exclusive of the Universities; in twenty-two cases two members are returned for an undivided borough constituency; thus there are 490 members representing a population of 36,070,492 persons, or an average of one member for 73,613 persons. The Counties and County divisions, with a population of 19,613,953 persons, return 253 members, an average of one member for 77,526 persons; the Boroughs and divisions of Boroughs return 237 members for 16,456,539 persons, an average of one member for 69,437 persons. The following table shows how far the actual representation varies from these averages. Where an undivided constituency is represented by two members, each member is reckoned in the table as representing half the population of the entire constituency:—

| Constituencies having the following Population per Representative. | Counties and Divisions of Counties. | | | Boroughs and Divisions of Boroughs. | | | |

* The numbers of electors are those of persons who in 1910 were qualified for inclusion in the Registers which came into force on 1st January, 1911 (see notes 2–4 at head of Table 3, page 4).

The eight boroughs in which the population per representative is less than 20,000 are as follows:—

| Borough. | Population, 1911. | Number of Electors, 1911.* |
|---|---|---|
| City of London (2 members) ... | 19,657 | 30,988 |

| New Windsor ... ... ... | 19,840 | 3,325 |
| Salisbury ... ... ... ... | 19,891 | 3,412 |

On the other hand there are no fewer than 83 constituencies in which the population is upwards of 100,000 per member; examples of the most populous single-member constituencies are shown hereunder:—

| Boroughs and Divisions of Boroughs. | Population, 1911. | Number of Electors, 1911.* | Divisions of Counties. | Population, 1911. | Number of Electors, 1911.* |

| | | | Handsworth, Staffordshire... | 159,798 | 29,769 |
| | | | Ealing, Middlesex ... ... | 158,125 | 26,779 |

As already stated, the extreme variations in the populations of the several constituencies are due mainly to their varying rates of increase since 1885. The populations at the Censuses of 1881 and 1911 of some of the above-mentioned constituencies are shown in the following table as illustrating this point:—

| Constituencies having less than 20,000 population per representative in 1911. | Population. | | Constituencies having more than 180,000 population per representative in 1911. | Population. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|

In 1891 there were only seven constituencies with populations exceeding 100,000 per member, and the most populous single-member constituency at that time, viz., Cardiff District of Boroughs, contained only 85,862 persons in 1881. By 1901 the number of constituencies having more than 100,000 population per member had risen to 41, and in 1911 it further rose to 83.

From the comparative statement above it appears that the eight constituencies each having less than 20,000 population showed in the aggregate an actual decrease since 1881, and even if the exceptional case of the City of London be excluded, the aggregate increase is insignificant; on the other hand, the eight large constituencies have a population nearly four times as great as that which served as the basis for the redistribution in 1885, and at the average rate of representation would return twenty-four members instead of eight.

* The numbers of electors are those of persons who in 1910 were qualified for inclusion in the Registers which came into force on 1st January, 1911 (see notes 2–4 at head of Table 3, page 4).

Number of Electors.—The total number of electors in 1911, exclusive of the Universities, was 6,386,679, of whom 3,750,259 were electors for county constituencies and 2,636,420 for borough constituencies; in proportion to population, therefore, there is on an average one elector among 5·6 persons in the country as a whole, 5·2 persons in the counties, and 6·2 persons in the boroughs. The proportions show less variation in the county constituencies than in the boroughs. In nineteen divisions of counties there is an average of more than six persons to one elector; these include eight divisions in Lancashire (Blackpool, Bootle, Gorton, Leigh, Newton, Ormskirk, Southport and Widnes), three in Middlesex (Brentford, Harrow and Tottenham), two in Glamorganshire (Eastern and Rhondda), two in Yorkshire (Barnsley and Rotherham), and one each in Cheshire (Wirral), in Kent (Isle of Thanet), in Sussex (Eastbourne), and in Hampshire (Basingstoke); in the last-named division the exceptionally high ratio of population to electors is due to the inclusion of the military population at Aldershot, without which the division approximates very closely to the average. On the other hand, the ratio of population to electors was as low as 3·4 in the Pudsey Division of Yorkshire West Riding, 3·7 in Radnorshire, 3·9 in the Tavistock Division of Devonshire, and 4·0 in the Gainsborough and Holland Divisions of Lincolnshire, in the Kingswinford Division of Staffordshire, and in the Holderness Division of Yorkshire East Riding.

The lowness of some of these rates is to be explained by the fact that under the Reform Act of 1832 and subsequent Acts, borough voters qualified as such in respect of a freehold of the clear yearly value of £10 have the privilege of voting also in a neighbouring county division. Thus the Leeds freeholders vote in the Pudsey Division, those of Boston in the Holland Division, Devonport in the Tavistock Division, Lincoln in the Gainsborough Division, Wolverhampton and part of Dudley in the Kingswinford Division, and Kingston upon Hull in the Holderness Division. It may be noted that Bristol, Exeter, Norwich and Nottingham, which were at the time of the Reform Act of 1832 "counties of themselves" have never been attached to any County, and consequently their freeholders have no vote in any county division.

Examples of high proportions of population to electors in parliamentary boroughs are found mainly in the metropolis; thus, in the several divisions of the Tower Hamlets the rates range from 8·0 in Poplar, 8·1 in Bow and Bromley, 8·2 in Limehouse, and 8·4 in Mile End, to 13·7 in Stepney, 15·0 in St. George, and 16·7 in Whitechapel, the three latter divisions containing a considerable alien, and therefore voteless, element in their populations; in both divisions of Kensington, in the South West Division of Bethnal Green, in Hammersmith, in North Lambeth, in South Paddington and in South St. Pancras there are more than eight persons to an elector, while outside London similarly high rates are found only in the Everton and Scotland Divisions of Liverpool.

In the Strand Parliamentary Borough, in Great Grimsby, in the South Division of Bristol and in Pembroke and Haverfordwest District of Boroughs there was an average of only 5·1 persons to an elector, in Penryn and Falmouth and in Lincoln 5·0, and in the Central Division of Birmingham and the Montgomery District of Boroughs 4·9.

Among all constituencies the City of London is unique in having more electors on the register than it had persons enumerated within its area on Census night,* there being 19,657 population as compared with 30,988 electors.

Conclusion.—The chief points brought out by an examination of the figures are thus (1) the lack of identity between parliamentary and any other areas in the Kingdom, and (2) the degree to which the relation between population and representation established in principle by the Act of 1885, has been disturbed by the growth and movement of the population since that date. It is hardly to be anticipated that complete correspondence between parliamentary and administrative areas could be permanently maintained, even if temporarily secured by a new scheme of redistribution; since the needs for further alteration would be found, in the future as in the past, to vary widely in the two cases. It is to be hoped, however, that in any future rearrangements of parliamentary areas it may be possible to base these areas upon, and build them up from, conveniently sized units in the shape of pre-existing administrative areas; the urban or rural district, the civil parish, or the ward, as the case may be.

* A special Census taken by the City Corporation on 25th April, 1911, showed that there were 364,061 persons engaged during the daytime in the City.

CENSUS OF ENGLAND AND WALES, 1911.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

(1) The acreage quoted in the several Tables is that of land and inland water together, exclusive of tidal water and foreshore; the figures are derived from the latest returns furnished by the Director-General of Ordnance Surveys.

(2) Persons on board vessels which were in the ports of England and Wales on the night of Sunday, April 2nd, 1911, or arrived there on the following day are, with certain exceptions, included in the population for the country as a whole, and are also distributed, with as much accuracy as the information obtained allows, to the several local areas. Fishermen who were at sea on the night of the Census and did not arrive in port on Monday, April 3rd, are not included in the returns of Population. The approximate numbers of fishermen absent on vessels belonging to the several ports of England and Wales are given in Table 5.

(3) The numbers of "Families or Separate Occupiers" given throughout these Tables are equivalent to the numbers of Schedules collected.

NOTE.—The population at each Census 1801 to 1831 is exclusive of the Army, Royal Navy, and Merchant Service at home and abroad; for 1841 the population includes the Army at home, men on shore belonging to the Royal Navy or to the Merchant Service, and, in a few cases, persons on board vessels in harbours; the population at each Census 1851 to 1911 includes the Army at home, men on shore belonging to the Royal Navy or to the Merchant Service, and all persons on board vessels in port on Census night or arriving the following day.

* In computing the decennial rate of increase the varying lengths of the intercensal periods have been taken into account, and the rates for the periods 1831–1841 and 1841–1851 have been further corrected by the exclusion of the Army, Navy, and Merchant Service from the population for 1841, and of the persons on board vessels from the population for 1851.

† In computing the proportion of females to males, 1801–1831, the following estimate of the numbers of men in the Army, Navy, and Merchant Service at home has been adopted:—

TABLE 3.—PARLIAMENTARY COUNTIES AND BOROUGHS AND THEIR SEVERAL DIVISIONS.—AREA; FAMILIES OR SEPARATE OCCUPIERS, 1911; POPULATION, 1901 AND 1911; AND NUMBER OF ELECTORS, 1901 AND 1911.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

(1) Parliamentary Boroughs which are co-extensive with County or other Municipal Boroughs of the same name are marked with an asterisk (*).

(2) The figures for Electors are taken from the Registers of Parliamentary Electors transmitted to the Home Office in pursuance of Section 37 of the Parliamentary Electors Registration Act, 1868. The officers in charge of Registers were asked to furnish a Summary of the number of Parliamentary Electors, exclusive of duplicate registrations retained on the Registers for the purposes of Local Government elections only. Any other duplicate registrations which may exist are included in the following figures.

(3) The duplicate registrations so included comprise plural votes (i.e., votes in different constituencies), each of which may lawfully be exercised, and duplicate registrations in respect of different qualifications in the same constituency or Parliamentary Borough, which do not confer an additional vote, and which, if known, are either struck off the register or made available for local elections only.

(4) The numbers of Electors given in the Table are those of persons who were qualified for inclusion in the Registers which came into force on the 1st January, 1901 and 1911 respectively.
